This portrait owes its inspiration to the last photograph of the President taken by Alexander Gardner on April 10, 1865. The news of Lee's surrender had reached the White House only hours earlier. The end of the Civil War was imminent, but the strain of the ordeal clearly shows up in the portrait. The sculptor, Leo Cherne, made a thorough study of Lincoln's face, which he describes as "a palimpsest of human paradox." The sculpture measures 7.5" in height.

The images of Mary, Willie, and Robert Lincoln are his own creation.

And while Lincoln lived at the White House, he enjoyed leisurely rides out to the Soldiers' Home, just as others living in 19th Century Washington did.
